Hammond Manufacturing Launches New Online Configuration Service

GUELPH, ON - Hammond Manufacturing Co. Ltd. (TSX: HMM.A) launched its new Q-Assembly web configuration service Friday. Q-Assembly is a quoting tool that enables online users to configure their equipment solution. Once users have submitted their configuration they will promptly receive their assembly quotation from the Hammond Manufacturing sales team.

"But this new web service is not just for quoting," said Q-Assembly Project Leader, Scott Hammond. "Should you decide to proceed with the order, your Q-Assembly will leave our manufacturing facility within 24 hours (1 business day) of receiving the Purchase Order.

The Q-Assembly website will soon feature many different Hammond products for assembly, but currently features the modular C4 Rack Cabinet.

Rob Riness, Operation Manager at Hammond said that the company has been preparing for the quick assembly launch for a few months, setting up specific area's and product to ensure sufficient inventory is available to cover the Q-Assembly program. Riness said, "We are confident inventory levels are sufficient to meet the various assembly configurations but if an order exceeds our inventory levels they will accommodate the request as part of our 10 day back order recovery program."

Both sales and operation's staff are enthusiastic at Hammond Manufacturing, ready to take quote requests and orders from this unique new service. For more information about the new Q-Assembly service by Hammond Manufacturing, point your browser to <http://www.q-assembly.com>.
